Gifts for Each Other

When choosing a gift for the groom, you should first agree on how much the two of you will spend on each other. It is often thoughtful to give something with personal meaning, and engraving adds a nice touch, often including the wedding date as well as initials. You may want to exchange gifts when the two of you are alone after the wedding.

Bride's Attendants' Gifts

Choosing the attendants' gifts may depend on a number of things. If you have a large number of attendants, cost can be a determining factor. You may want to give them all an identical necklace or other piece of jewelry, which can be worn on the day of the wedding, enhancing their dresses. Your honor attendant's gift can be slightly different if desired.

Another idea is to have gift baskets made for your attendants. These could include a number of items, including jewelry, nail polish, panty hose, sachets, address book, and perfume. Attendants' gifts are usually presented at the rehearsal or dinner, when everyone is together.
